from plot twists to dialogue authors have a long list to think about when revising and polishing a novel these 101 questions and explanations will help you improve and check your novel's opening plot and character development conflict pacing dialogue and of course the writing itself after months or years of working on a story it's difficult to check the quality on every fiction element 101 questions looks at overarching issues small details and writing technique you may learn about new techniques and tips see a method differently or realize that you forgot a trick this handy list of 101 questions explores many

possible ways to improve specific areas add layers and depth strengthen conflict find plot holes and identify writing issues sample question 40 do all of your characters have strong feelings about each other working on this element truly adds another layer to your story in life we meet people and classify them right away it's not often that we know a person but don't have any opinions or feelings about them but we see that in stories all the time sometimes i read or edit a novel and have a hard time telling the characters apart this arises when the characters aren't distinct but it's also caused by a lack of feeling toward each other if your hero really dislikes another character that will color the hero's description and interaction with that character take a closer look at your work make a list of all of your characters and then describe how your hero feels about them if your hero doesn't feel anything that shows in your story right now do you need to make that character more colorful and by colorful i mean annoying more pushy more opinionated more deceitful more secretive more talkative more silent more helpful more sweet more of a pushover more something look at the relationship between all of your main characters it might help to make a chart then think about how they interact and secretly feel about each other you can have a lot of fun in this area and it really deepens your story if your students groan and go limp when you suggest they revise their writing this is the book for you deep revision covers revision as a natural process learning to revise by editing other people's writing learning to revise by using other people's comments on your writing going deeper by adding changing media to revise using point of view and voice for revising fiction revising nonfiction with the techniques of fiction learning revision by revising existing works of literature beginning and polishing structuring the longer work willis gives a wealth of specific revision exercises for both fiction and nonfiction as well as examples from her own students and from literature
