- 1 The Setup Exposition This is your worldbuilding phase Introduce your characters their relationships and the setting Think of it as setting the stage literally and figuratively Avoid information dumps weave essential details organically through dialogue and action Imagine a painter meticulously laying down the base colors of a masterpiece This sets the tone and establishes expectations for the audience Anecdote Consider Shakespeares Romeo and Juliet The setup immediately introduces the feud between the Montagues and Capulets setting the stage for the tragic love story to unfold
- 2 The Inciting Incident This is the catalyst the event that disrupts the status quo and sets your protagonist on their journey Its the moment the story truly begins This should be impactful raising the stakes and creating immediate conflict Think of it as the ignition spark that sets a fire ablaze
- 2 Metaphor The inciting incident is the pebble dropped into the still pond creating ripples that spread throughout the entire play
- 3 Plot Point 1 This is the first major turning point Your protagonist makes a significant decision committing to the central conflict Its a point of no return escalating the stakes and pushing the narrative forward This is where your protagonist firmly embraces their journey committing to overcoming obstacles

4 Rising Action

This phase builds tension and suspense Obstacles are presented challenges are met and the conflict intensifies Think of it as a climber ascending a treacherous mountain face each step increasing the difficulty and risk This section allows for exploration of character development and intricate plot lines

5 Plot Point 2

This is the climax the highest point of tension and conflict Its the moment of truth the ultimate confrontation between protagonist and antagonist or the point of peak emotional intensity This is the crescendo of your play the moment where the audience is on the edge of their seats

Vivid Picture a storm raging at its peak the wind howls the rain lashes down and the thunder crashes This is the intensity of Plot Point 2

6 Falling Action

The immediate aftermath of the climax The consequences of the protagonists actions play out and the tension begins to subside Its a period of reflection resolution and emotional processing Think of it as the calm after the storm a period of quiet contemplation and assessing the damage

7 Resolution

The final denouement Loose ends are tied up and the overall theme or message of the play is reinforced This is not necessarily a happy ending but a satisfying conclusion that leaves the audience with something to ponder Consider it the final brushstrokes of the painting bringing all the elements together in a cohesive whole
