if a treaty from the 1850s regulating commerce or forbidding degrading treatment of persons is to be interpreted 150 years later does commerce or degrading treatment of persons have the same meaning at the time of interpretation as they had when the treaty was agreed the evolutionary interpretation of treaties has proven one of the most controversial topics in the practice of international law indeed it has been seen as going against the very grain of the law of treaties and has been argued to be contrary to the intention of the parties breaching the principle of consent this book asks what the place of evolutionary interpretation is within the understanding of treaties at a time when many important international legal instruments are over 50 years old it sets out to place the evolutionary interpretation of treaties on a firm footing within the general rule of interpretation as codified in article 31 of the vienna convention on the law of treaties the book demonstrates that the evolutionary interpretation of treaties in common with all other types of interpretation such as good faith the text of the treaty context object and purpose is in fact a based upon an objective understanding of the intention of the parties in order to marry intention and evolution in this way the book argues that on the one hand evolutionary interpretation is the product of the correct application of article 31 and on the other that article 31 is geared towards the establishment of the intention of the parties the evolutionary interpretation of treaties is therefore shown to represent an intended evolution the volume is a festschrift offered to Charles Kannengiesser on the occasion of his 80th birthday and honours him for his numerous scholarly accomplishments its twenty five contributions discuss some of the major issues pertaining to the reception and interpretation of the bible in late antique christianity and judaism they focus on the ways in which communities and individuals understood the bible and interpreted its traditions to address their historical social and theological requirements since the bible was by far the most important book during these centuries a discussion of its influence in such contexts will illuminate significant aspects of the formation of western civilisation

Dr Carter's practical authoritative and superbly illustrated guide to breast biopsy interpretation is now in its fourth edition completely updated throughout the book retains its focus on the clinical significance of common pathologic changes and the crucial pathologic distinctions that must be made when interpreting unusual or borderline lesions this edition includes new information on classifications of breast disease premalignant histopathologic changes and risk factors for recurrence of disease after conservative radiation therapy new chapters cover nipple lesions and axillary lymph nodes a bound in cd rom contains 500 full color images and an internet link to pubmed this report describes how strong motion records obtained from the earthquake induced motions of highway bridges may be analyzed for use in the evaluation of bridge designs and bridge design procedures this report is divided into five principal sections the first section describes strong motion instrumentation and strong motion records in the second section a mathematical model for the dynamic response of bridges to strong ground shaking is formulated the third section describes how analog records scaled by hand can be analyzed force levels throughout bridges and mathematical model parameters are found from hypothetical strong motions for two example bridges the fourth section describes how digitized records can be analyzed a linear least squares fitting procedure in the time domain for identifying mathematical model parameters from recorded strong motions is described hypothetical motions for three example bridges are analyzed using this procedure to yield best fit mathematical models the last section consists of appendices included are a more extensive introduction to dynamics of structures and listings of the programs used to identify the best fit mathematical models we used newer larger scale 2007 colour air photos to interpret habitat attributes and classify habitat quality of 14 marbled murrelet brachyramphus marmoratus nest sites identified in 1992 $n = 2$ and 1999 $n = 12$ in mussel inlet on the central coast of british columbia mussel inlet is a fjordland environment atypical of other areas for which the air photo interpretation classification has been tested using nest sites i e haida gwaii vancouver island and south coastal british columbia nesting habitat described by 3 ha plots centred on the nest site was characterized in mussel inlet as having complex canopies with large trees in mid to low meso slope positions and as such is comparable to that reported elsewhere in british columbia however comparisons of the nest plot habitat attributes to those at 27 random plots also suggested that interpretations of murrelet habitat selectivity for mussel inlet differed from other coastal areas due to differences in characteristics and availability of forest structures overall in mussel inlet more nest plots were classed as lower quality i e 50 low and very low on air photos compared to other british columbian studies i e 14 low and very low although selectivity testing based on air photo habitat class was inconclusive particularly for the high and very high quality habitats for which limited habitat was available 1 of the study area a trend was indicated for higher proportional use of moderate and low habitats and lower proportional use of very low habitats we discuss limitations of the samples used for this study and issues in interpretation resolution and scale in applying the air photo methods in topographically complex fjordland landscapes such as mussel inlet given these limitations and issues we recommend use of aerial survey methods to confirm occurrence of nest platforms
