using the slave narratives of Henry Bibb and Frederick Douglass as well as the work of W. E. B. Du Bois, James Baldwin, Walter Mosley, and Barack Obama, Ronda C. Henry Anthony examines how women's bodies are used in African American literature to fund the production of black masculine ideality and power. In tracing representations of ideal black masculinities and femininities, the author shows how black men's struggles for gendered agency are inextricably entwined with their complicated relation to white men and normative masculinity. The historical context in which this study couches these struggles highlights the extent to which shifting socioeconomic circumstances dictate the ideological, cultural, and emotional terms upon which black men conceptualize identity. Yet Anthony quickly moves to texts that challenge traditional constructions of black masculinity. In these texts, she traces how the emergence of collaboratively gendered discourses or a blending of black female and male feminist consciousnesses are reshaping black masculinities, femininities, and intraracial relations for a new century.
