of course travelling in russia is no longer what it was during the last half century a vast network of railways has been constructed and one can now travel in a comfortable first class carriage from berlin to st petersburg or moscow and thence to odessa sebastopol the lower volga the caucasus central asia or eastern siberia until the outbreak of the war there was a train twice a week with through carriages from moscow to port arthur and it must be admitted that on the main lines the passengers have not much to complain of the carriages are decidedly better than in england and in winter they are kept warm by small iron stoves assisted by double windows and double doors a very necessary precaution in a land where the thermometer often descends to 30 degrees below zero the train never attains it is true a high rate of speed so at least english and americans think but then we must remember that russians are rarely in a hurry and like to have frequent opportunities of eating and drinking in russia time is not money if it were nearly all the subjects of the tsar would always have a large stock of ready money on hand and would often have great difficulty in spending it in reality be it parenthetically remarked a russian with a superabundance of ready money is a phenomenon rarely met with in real life in conveying passengers at the rate of from fifteen to thirty miles an hour the railway companies do at least all that they promise but in one very important respect they do not always strictly fulfil their engagements the traveller takes a ticket for a certain town and on arriving at what he imagines to be his destination he may find merely a railway station surrounded by fields on making inquiries he discovers to his disappointment that the station is by no means identical with the town bearing the same name and that the railway has fallen several miles short of fulfilling the bargain as he understood the terms of the contract indeed it might almost be said that as a general rule railways in russia like camel drivers in certain eastern countries studiously avoid the towns this seems at first a strange fact it is possible to conceive that the bedouin is so enamoured of tent life and nomadic habits that he shuns a town as he would a man trap but surely civil engineers and railway contractors have no such dread of brick and mortar the true reason i suspect is that land within or immediately beyond the municipal barrier is relatively dear and that the railways being completely beyond the invigorating influence of healthy competition can afford to look upon the comfort and convenience of passengers as a secondary consideration gradually it is true this state of things is being improved by private initiative as the railways refuse to come to the towns the towns are extending towards the railways and already some prophets are found bold enough to predict that in the course of time those long new straggling streets without an inhabited hinterland which at present try so severely the springs of the rickety droshkis will be properly paved and kept in decent repair for my own part i confess i am a little sceptical with regard to this prediction and i can only use a favourite expression of the russian peasants dai bog god grant it may be so it is but fair to state that in one celebrated instance neither engineers nor railway contractors were directly to blame from st petersburg to moscow the locomotive runs for a distance of 400 miles almost as the crow is supposed to fly turning neither to the right hand nor to the left for twelve weary hours the passenger in the express train looks out on forest and morass and rarely catches sight of human habitation only once he perceives in the distance what may be called a town it is tver which has been thus favoured not because it is a place of importance but simply because it happened to be near the bee line and why was the railway constructed in this extraordinary fashion for the best of all reasons because the tsar so ordered it when the preliminary survey was being made nicholas i learned that the officers entrusted with the task and the minister of ways and roads in the number were being influenced more by personal than technical considerations and he determined to cut the gordian knot in true imperial style when the minister laid before him the map with the intention of explaining the proposed route he took a ruler drew a straight line from the one terminus to the other and remarked in a tone that precluded all discussion you will construct the line so and the line was so constructed remaining to all future ages like st petersburg and the pyramids a magnificent monument of autocratic power formerly this well known incident was often cited in whispered philippics to illustrate the evils of the autocratic form of government imperial whims it was said over ride grave economic considerations in recent years however a change seems to have taken place in public opinion and some people now assert that this so called imperial whim was an act of far seeing policy as by far the greater part of the goods and passengers are carried the whole length of the line it is well that the line should be as short as possible and that branch lines should be constructed to the towns lying to the right and left evidently there is a good deal to be said in favour of this view in the development of the railway system there has been another disturbing cause which is not likely to occur to the english mind in england individuals and companies habitually act according to their private interests and the state interferes as little as possible private initiative does as it pleases unless the authorities can prove that important bad consequences will necessarily result in russia the onus probandi lies on the other side private initiative is allowed to do nothing until it gives guarantees against all possible bad consequences when any great enterprise is projected the first question is how will this new scheme affect the interests of the state thus when the course of a new railway has to be determined the military authorities are among the first to be consulted and their opinion has a great influence on the ultimate decision the natural consequence is that the railway map of russia presents to the eye of the strategist much that is quite unintelligible to the ordinary observer a fact that will become apparent even to the uninitiated as soon as a war breaks out in eastern europe russia is no longer what she was in the days of the crimean war when troops and stores had to be conveyed hundreds of miles by the most primitive means of transport at that time she had only 750 miles of railway now she has over 36 000 miles and every year new lines are constructed the water communication has likewise in recent years been greatly improved on the principal rivers there are now good steamers unfortunately the climate puts serious obstructions in the way of navigation for nearly half of the year the rivers are covered with ice and during a great part of the open season navigation is difficult when the ice and snow melt the rivers overflow their banks and lay a great part of the low lying country under water so that many villages can only be approached in boats but very soon the flood subsides and the water falls so rapidly that by midsummer the larger steamers have great difficulty in picking their way among the sandbanks the neva alone that queen of northern rivers has at all times a plentiful supply of water contains reports of various dept committees and officials plus lists of officers and deceased members
