focusing on Gregory's trinitarian thought his fascinating minor treatises are analysed in detail supporting studies deal with theological and philosophical concepts as well as with the context of his writings against Apollinarius around 392 Theodore of Mopsuestia delivered his homilies to candidates for baptism using Theodore's homilies this work studies the reception and influence of the Nicene Creed in the imperial church since Theodosius passed at Nicæa in 325 the Creed became an official dogma of the empire in 380/81 what was its role in the life of the church and in the theological controversies of the subsequent years at which point did the people start to pay attention to its exact original wording to which extent were Theodore's theological teachings influenced by the trinitarian dogma of Nicæa the text of Theodore's baptismal Creed is reconstructed in both its Syriac and Greek versions it proves to be one of the most important sources of the Niceno-Constantinopolitan Creed of 381 until now the period following the Council of Nicea has remained a dark age of early Christian history this is partly due to the fact that Eusebius' last and important works Contra Marcellum and De ecclesiastica theologia have not sufficiently been studied comparatively little interest has also been given to the pseudo-Athanasian text Contra Arianos IV careful study and comparison of these works against the background of the post-Nicene debate between Asterius Marcellus Eusebius and Photinus has revealed that as Stegmann already proposed in 1917 Contra Arianos IV was written in about 340 and formed a Nicene critique of Marcellus his pupil and opponents therefore Stegmann's suggestion of the authorship of Apollinarius of Laodicea needs further investigation this study on Contra Arianos IV sheds new light on the years between Nicea and the Synods of Rome and Antioch 340/341

this book treats a decisive phase in the theological history of the fourth century AD when in 360 the Arians Aetius and Eunomius maintained the difference in essences between the Father and the Son and the created nature of the Holy Spirit the theologians of Nicæan orthodoxy were challenged to develop a theory of the homousia of the Father Son and Holy Ghost which paved the way to the trinitarian doctrinal decisions of the Council of Constantinople in 381 the two books Adversus Eunomium IV V probably form the first literary reaction to the Neo-Arians and set the tone for the further development of the debate in the MSS in which they are transmitted they follow on from the three books by Basil of Caesarea against Eunomius but have been seen since at least the 18th century as pseudepigraphical and were probably composed by Apollinarius of Laodicea the introduction to the present work discusses questions of authorship identifies opponents not only Aetius and Eunomius but also Marcellus of Ankyra demonstrates the hitherto often questioned integrity of the tract and establishes the date of composition of book IV as 360 and of book V as 362/3 it also makes particularly clear the influence of contemporary philosophy the translation follows the improved Migne text of 1886 while the commentary elucidates the often difficult content and prepares the way for further research on the interweaving of the threads of theological debate in the second half of the fourth century
