this book analyzes the interaction of european social models the institutions structuring labor markets supply side and their turbulent macroeconomic environment from the deep europe wide recession ending germany's post unification boom through monetary union's establishment to the great recession following the recent financial crisis the analysis reaches two conclusions challenging the dominant view that the social models caused unemployment by impairing labor markets efficiency in the name of equity first the social models employment and distributive effects are far outweighed by their macroeconomic environment especially in the eurozone where its truncated structure of economic governance transformed the great recession into a sovereign debt crisis second instead of a trade off between efficiency and equity the employment effects of counteracting markets tendency to generate inequality depends on the macroeconomic conditions under which it occurs and how it is done the classic national security concerns of nuclear proliferation and the production sale and use of weapons of mass destruction cannot be addressed in the Korean peninsula without at the same time considering the implications and interrelationship of what are these days known as the human security issues of food poverty and perhaps more controversially freedom we agree that East Asia and the world are more dangerous with the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK) or North Korea in possession of nuclear weapons it is also argued however that a comprehensive security analysis identifies many equally significant threats to regional security such as the risk from industrial and nuclear accidents and the potential for transborder crime arising from the lack of legal and productive avenues for economic activity for North Korea's poverty-stricken citizens in this book Korea's soft security issues are as important as hard security matters and that the latter cannot be understood or its dilemmas unravelled without a clear engagement with the former this book looks at Korean security dilemmas from the perspective of the various international actors not just from the viewpoint of the major protagonists the DPRK and the United States we show that different states and international organizations have different and multiple interests in their relationships with the DPRK and with each other

North Korea's nuclear weapons and ballistic missile programs have drawn international attention for years in the early 1960s Pyongyang began to pursue the capability to produce advanced weapons systems including rockets and missiles however foreign assistance and technology particularly from China and the Soviet Union were instrumental in the acquisition of these capabilities the ballistic missile inventory now totals about 800 road mobile missiles including about 200 Nodong missiles that could strike Japan in April 2007 North Korea for the first time displayed two new missiles a short range tactical missile that poses a threat to Seoul and US forces in South Korea and an intermediate range missile that could potentially strike Guam although North Korea has not demonstrated the ability to produce a nuclear warhead package for its missiles its missiles are believed to be capable of delivering chemical and possibly biological munitions North Korean media and government officials claim the country needs a nuclear deterrent to cope with the hostile policy of the United States but Pyongyang has never officially abandoned its objective of completing the revolution in the South little is known about North Korean military doctrine and the role of its ballistic missiles but National Defense Commission Chairman Kim Chŏng-il has ultimate authority over their disposition

Since 2000 the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) has coordinated the Generations and Gender Programme which combines data collection with analysis of demographic trends and the roles of different factors that influence them that of public policy in particular this volume contains the keynote papers and a summary of contributions to the conference on how generations and gender shape demographic change held in Geneva in May 2008 as well as the conceptual background note and the conference report it aims to disseminate the conference proceedings to a wider audience thereby inspiring broader debate recent European data suggest that many more people of reproductive age would like to form families and have children than actually do so and many parents would like to have more children than they have what role should public policy play regarding these issues should reconciling work and family life be the main avenue of policy concurrent with lower birth rates European populations are ageing which requires adaptation across all spheres of society what are the best policy responses to these demographic trends and how can research better support finding them this volume provides a unified framework for the analysis of short and medium run macroeconomics it develops a core new keynesian macro model based on imperfect competition and nominal rigidities and shows how this compares with alternatives
