seminar paper from the year 2010 in the subject business economics marketing corporate communication crm market research social media grade 1 7 akad university of applied sciences pinneberg course fgi 03 language english abstract today s business is based on the division of labor different people have to work together in order to create values and offer products or services but these people are individuals with different needs and wants different skills and abilities they have different social economical or cultural backgrounds as well as different working methods they have opposing interests and suffer from a lack of information about what others need and want therefore the division of labor requires a coordinating element a manager or a leader it is their task to coordinate all the individuals creating a unified direction of work by this all efforts can be focused on a common goal commonly the terms management and leadership are used synonymous with reference to the coordination function in business or administration this raises the question whether there is a difference between the two terms management and leadership and if so how this difference can be described and defined sometimes one can hear the saying that managers do the things right but leaders do the right things this adage states a significant difference between leadership and management however there is a heated debate about this topic the opinions differ widely about this topic this paper will discuss the terms management and leadership in a theoretical and practical way these two terms will be defined as well as differentiated from each other a special focus will be laid on the management functions and managerial roles and activities this will be discussed from a theoretical point of view in addition a practical example will clarify the theoretical angle in order to understand whether someone is being an effective manager it is necessary to have some idea of the expectations regarding the person's roles and activities within the organization a number of different approaches have been taken in creating models of managerial functions or activities fayol famously argued that there were five principle managerial functions planning organizing commanding coordinating and controlling and others have accepted these categories and added a handful of others such as staffing and rewarding mintzberg criticized fayol's five functions as being an inaccurate reflection of the complex and chaotic nature of the manager's tasks and suggested an alternative model of the ten core roles or organized sets of behaviors identified with a managerial position which he divided up into three groups interpersonal roles informational roles and decisional roles others have pointed out that it is useful to distinguish between functional and general managers each of whom have their own unique duties responsibilities and skill requirements finally the position or level of the manager in the organizational hierarchy is likely to be relevant to his or her roles and activities first line managers focus primarily on supervision of operational employees middle managers focus primarily on supervising the first line managers and or staff departments and top level or senior managers focus on setting the strategic direction for the entire organization
