this study examined the association between individual attachment and interactive conflict styles and the overall influence on marital satisfaction in 207 married individuals the application of attachment theory to this study of adult romantic relationships was established via factor analysis and yielded two dimensions self anxiety and other avoidance accommodation and demand withdraw were the two forms of conflict interaction studied which respectively are constructive and destructive styles of engagement that impact marital satisfaction individuals completed self report measures of attachment accommodation demand withdraw and global marital satisfaction the current study yielded statistically significant results and supported all of the research hypotheses there were negative relationships found between the attachment dimensions of anxiety and avoidance and total accommodation while positive relationships were determined between both attachment dimensions and demand withdraw behaviors in relationship to marital satisfaction an individual's total accommodation was positively related while demand withdraw behaviors were inversely associated there were also inverse relationships found between both the attachment dimensions and marital satisfaction these findings suggest that the data are consistent with previous research on attachment accommodation demand withdraw behavior and marital satisfaction in addition to supporting prior findings this study also had several unique contributions a statistically significant relationship was found between the constructive and destructive conflict styles which suggested total accommodation was associated with lower levels of demand withdraw in addition a path model for the variables of attachment accommodation demand withdraw and marital satisfaction was developed this display of variables is especially useful in showing the bidirectionality of constructive and destructive behaviors in marriage research implications for these findings are presented and suggestions for future research are discussed this book is about the two tiered system and invisible imbalance that operates within the framework of the family it is about the fantasy of the happily ever after which the wedding industry promotes and western society reinforces why are we hanging onto this faux happiness at the expense of our future well being why don t we wonder what happened after they lived happily ever after and if in fact they really do what i hope to achieve by writing this book is to rattle the cage of young brides about to embark on this journey to talk about these issues with their future partners and to set the system up in a more equal way so no one is caught off guard if and when things crumble it will be difficult to achieve this task because no one wants to think about things falling apart before the marriage even begins and most certainly it sours the sweetness of the fantasy of the happily ever after as we know it what we don t realize is that there will be less bitterness and upset for the family especially for the children if we pursue this line of thinking isn t that the real happily ever after
