combining the theoretical tools of comparative politics with the substantive concerns of environmental policy experts explore responses to environmental problems across nations and political systems how do different societies respond politically to environmental problems around the globe answering this question requires systematic cross national comparisons of political institutions regulatory styles and state society relations the field of comparative environmental politics approaches this task by bringing the theoretical tools of comparative politics to bear on the substantive concerns of environmental policy this book outlines a comparative environmental politics framework and applies it to concrete real world problems of politics and environmental management after a comprehensive review of the literature exploring domestic environmental politics around the world the book provides a sample of major currents within the field showing how environmental politics intersects with such topics as the greening of the state the rise of social movements and green parties european union expansion corporate social responsibility federalism political instability management of local commons and policymaking under democratic and authoritarian regimes it offers fresh insights into environmental problems ranging from climate change to water scarcity and the disappearance of tropical forests and it examines actions by state and nonstate actors at levels from the local to the continental the book will help scholars and policymakers make sense of how environmental issues and politics are connected around the globe and is ideal for use in upper level undergraduate and graduate courses it has been well established that many of the injustices that people around the world experience every day from food insecurity to unsafe labor conditions and natural disasters are the result of wide scale structural problems of politics and economics these are not merely random personal problems or consequences of bad luck or bad planning confronted by this fact it is natural to ask what should or can we do to mitigate everyday injustices in one sense we answer this question when we buy the local homeless street newspaper decide where to buy our clothes remember our reusable bags when we shop donate to disaster relief or send letters to corporations about labor rights but given the global scale of injustices related to poverty environmental change gender and labor can these individual acts really impact the seemingly intractable global social political and economic structures that perpetuate and exacerbate them moreover can we respond to injustices in the world in ways that do more than just address their consequences in this book brooke a ackerly both answers the question of what should we do and shows that it is the wrong question to ask to ask the right question we need to ground our normative theory of global justice in the lived experience of injustice using a feminist critical methodology she argues that what to do about injustice is not just an ethical or moral question but a political question about assuming responsibility for injustice regardless of our causal responsibility and extent of our knowledge of the injustice furthermore it is a matter that needs to be guided by principles of human rights as she argues while many understand human rights as political goals or entitlements they can also guide political strategy her aims are twofold to present a theory of what it means to take responsibility for injustice and for ensuring human rights as well as to develop a guide for how to take responsibility in ways that support local and global movements for transformative politics in order to illustrate her theory and guide for action ackerly draws on fieldwork on the rana plaza collapse in 2013 the food crisis of 2008 and strategies from 125 activist organizations working on women's and labor rights across 26 countries just responsibility integrates these ways of taking political responsibility into a rich theory of political community accountability and leadership in which taking responsibility for injustice itself transforms the fabric of political life
