beauty engages fourth century bishop gregory of nyssa to address beauty's place in theology and the broader world with the recent resurgence of attention to beauty among theologians questions still remain about what exactly beauty is how it is perceived and whether we should celebrate its return if beauty fell out of favor because it was seen to distract from the weightier concerns of poverty and suffering because it can even be a tool of oppression why should we laud it now gregory's writings offer surprisingly rich and relevant reflections that can move contemporary conversations beyond current impasses and critiques of beauty drawing gregory into conversation with such disparate voices as novelist j m coetzee and art theorist kaja silverman beauty displays the importance of beauty to theology and theology to beauty in a discussion that bridges ancient and modern practical and theoretical secular and religious contemporary culture is rediscovering the importance of beauty for both social transformation and personal happiness theologians have sought in their varied ways to demonstrate how god's beauty is associated with notions of truth and goodness this book breaks new ground by suggesting that liturgy is the means par excellence by which an experience of beauty is communicated drawing from both secular and religious understandings in particular the mystical and apophatic tradition the book demonstrates how liturgy has the potential to achieve the one ultimately reliable form of beauty because its embodied components are able to reflect the disturbing beauty of the one to whom worship is always offered such components rely on understanding the aesthetic dynamics upon which liturgy relies this book draws from a broad range of disciplines concerned with understanding beauty and self transformation and concludes that while secular utopian forms have much to contribute to ethical transformation they ultimately fail since they lack the christological and eschatological framework needed which liturgy alone provides we experience beauty and risk on a daily basis in what we see what we feel how we accept and judge others and why we are human beauty and risk both challenge and frustrate us to think learn listen and question ourselves humanity's beauty and risk is an exploration of that challenge one part poetry and two parts philosophy this text explores the stages of human development infancy's dictums toddler's structure childhood's truth adolescence's love adult's maturity and the higher self readers are guided to be fully present aware of where they are and what they are doing and to question what they think they know about these two captivating states this mental exercise can be practised on a daily basis making us more aware of how and why we experience feel and accept beauty and risk in our lives when we reflect on those experiences we think about what makes us different and what makes us human
