the task of object localization in medical images is a corner stone of automatic image processing and a prerequisite for other medical

imaging tasks in this thesis we present a general framework for the automatic detection and localization of spatially correlated key points in medical images based on a conditional random field crf the problem of selecting suitable potential functions knowledge sources and defining a reasonable graph topology w r t the dataset is automated by our proposed data driven crf optimization we show how our fairly simple setup can be applied to different medical datasets involving different image dimensionalities i e 2d and 3d image modalities i e x ray ct mri and target objects ranging from 2 to 102 distinct key points by automatically adapting the crf to the dataset while the used general default configuration represents an easy to transfer setup it already outperforms other state of the art methods on three out of four datasets by slightly gearing the proposed approach to the fourth dataset we further illustrate that the approach is capable of reaching state of the art performance of highly sophisticated and data specific deep learning based approaches additionally we suggest and evaluate solutions for common problems of graph based approaches such as the reduced search space and thus the potential exclusion of the correct solution better handling of spatial outliers using latent variables and the incorporation of invariant higher order potential functions each extension is evaluated in detail and the whole method is additionally compared to a rivaling convolutional neural network based approach on a hard problem i e the localization of many locally similar repetitive target key points in terms of exploiting the spatial correlation finally we illustrate how follow up tasks segmentation in this case may benefit from a correct localization by reaching state of the art performance using off the shelf methods in combination with our proposed method
