fundamental world changes that simultaneously undermine a nation state's charisma and promote the rise of a supra national system have wide ranging effects upon national states within a modern global society my dissertation empirically examines the effects of social and cultural globalization on systems of mass schooling which are central institutions in every country globally primary and secondary education initially emerged as the premier tool for nation states to create a unified national citizenry loyal to their country and socialized into a common cultural tradition i examine the extent to which this original nationalizing purpose of schooling is challenged by the increased emphases on universal human rights and diversity in civic education the analyses consist of two sections hierarchical linear models are used to analyze a unique primary data source of 521 social science textbooks from 74 countries during the period 1970 2008 these findings show a worldwide increase in emphasis on human rights and increases in discussions of diversity in well established liberal democracies cross national quantitative analyses are complemented by a qualitative case study of social science curricula in british columbia bc which examines nation building within a context of strong emphasis on diversity and human rights the bc study utilizes currently approved high school citizenship education textbooks as well as older textbooks dating back to 1871 it also draws on a selection of historical documents including ministry of education reports curricular frameworks and high school exit exams process wise i find the incorporation of human rights and diversity reflects macro level changes in national and global society content wise i find four main approaches to reconciling ideas of human rights and diversity with national identity 1 framing human rights and multiculturalism as part of national identity 2 using pedagogical approaches that promote multiple perspectives and individual agency 3 celebrating social and scientific figures and accomplishments as the source of national pride and 4 drawing on exogenous sources to affirm state legitimacy this study is one of the first to theorize that civic education worldwide is moving away from a national focus and to provide empirical evidence of this trend a key implication is that educational systems are being repurposed from their original goal of constructing a unitary national citizenry to a new view emphasizing human diversity and equality in a globally interconnected world further students are increasingly taught that the global civil society and non state actors are important and legitimate agents of social change international law is rich in promise but poor in detail and practical application about the rights of indigenous people this book focuses on practical measures that have been implemented in states to give effect to free prior and informed consent fpic self determination by indigenous people special electoral measures to benefit indigenous people and the role of advisory bodies to advocate for indigenous interests in many comparative works there are often only scant or brief reference to some country experiences but in this book several case studies are explored in depth to promote a greater understanding of the self determination arrangements that have been implemented these case studies represent a form of glocalisation whereby global principles are applied to find local solutions and local solutions in turn inform greater clarity and specificity to global principles at the end of each chapter key lessons that can be drawn from the respective case studies are identified in the hope that those may inform developments in other countries and in international law this book represents a unique contribution to understanding the interactions between law and religion in contemporary brazil it analyzes how the regulation of religions according to the classical notion of secularism has become a source of tensions since the 1990s against this background the respective chapters demonstrate on the basis of various case studies how the constitutional principle of pluralism introduced by the 1988 federal constitution after a military dictatorship has been addressed by new political actors such as religious leaders parliamentarians influencers state representatives and activists in particular the chapters demonstrate how the mobilization of legal language notably the language of human rights has become fundamental to developing and consolidating new political agendas concerning secularism tolerance freedom of expression gender and sexuality family and cultural heritage in the authors approach human rights assume a central role in social disputes as a language in which actors constitute themselves as rights subjects form activist networks and pursue their goals by expressing themselves in public given its focus and scope the book will be of interest to all scholars seeking to understand the relationships between diversity and the regulation of religious practices in plural societies where the classical notion of secularism continues to show its limitations being yourself living a life that is truly your own that expresses your unique personality and your distinctive values many people want to live such a life being yourself asks what it takes to do so it examines questions about the self the individual who acts together with questions about self expression the relations between the self and action it explains self knowledge and self direction in terms of a repertory of skills that gives people insight into who they are who they want to be and how they want to engage with the world unlike other accounts of self and action being yourself takes into account the multidimensionality of the self embodiment interpersonal ties nonconscious desires and enculturation as well as rationality it accents the ways in which atypical emotional responses empathy and oppositional imagery can contribute to moral understanding it argues that repressive regimes cannot completely crush people's determination to live lives of their own but it shows why it is vital to seek social changes that dismantle obstacles to this kind of life in matters such as affirmative action or home schooling rights of ethnic and other minority groups often come into conflict with those of society in a culturally diverse population such as ours but before considering the dilemmas posed by these issues we must first ask such basic but important questions as what group rights are and how they intersect with the principles of democracy this new collection brings together some of today's leading thinkers from the cutting edge of these debates taking in a broad range of issues confronting philosophers sociologists and political scientists contributors such as carl wellman carol gould and rex martin examine the nature of groups and the conflict between group rights and democracy and also consider case studies depicting current issues in cultural ethnic and religious rights the first section on the nature of groups examines some of the perplexing alternatives in the formulation of a theory of group rights these articles investigate the kinds of rights minorities might claim and ask when groups can be held responsible for the acts of some of their members the second section addresses the treatment of groups in a democracy and the precarious balance between indifference toward minorities and capitulation to their demands here the contributors examine five principles for the sensitive treatment of minority and disadvantaged groups in a democratic society a final section explores specific conflicts between subgroup and societal claims through case studies dealing with affirmative action religious practice and the education of children and the land rights of indigenous peoples by drawing on the legal and political dilemmas related to these cases the authors confront issues of core versus peripheral interests of individual member versus subgroup rights and of the possibilities for social openness raised in the preceding sections written from varied perspectives groups and group rights offers stimulating reading for both students and professionals as it takes on some of the most pressing dilemmas confronting our society human rights are by definition universal yet in a world characterized by enormous diversity there is no consensus about the implications of the universality of human rights in several regions of the world human rights conceptions are promoted that challenge the mainstream largely western dominated discourse on this subject this volume offers an analysis of context specific human rights discourses from east asia subsaharan africa and the muslim world rather than interpreting these as threats to universality the author examines how and to what extent the claims that are advanced can and should be accommodated in order to further the universality of human rights a theory of inclusive universality is developed and its implications are translated into legal techniques on the one hand there are flexibility techniques allowing for contextual diversity in the interpretation and application of human rights norms on the other hand giving credit to non western views also implies that there should be room for transformation of those human rights norms
