In this elegant book Richard Bosworth explores Venice not the glorious Venice of the Venetian Republic but from the fall of the Republic in 1797 and the Risorgimento up through the present day. Bosworth looks at the glamour and squalor of the Belle Époque and the dark underbelly of modernization the two world wars and the far reaching oppressions of the fascist regime through to the Disneylandification of Venice and the tourist boom the worldwide attention of the Biennale and film festival and current threats of subsidence and flooding posed by global warming. He draws out major themes the increasingly anachronistic but deeply embedded Catholic Church the two faces of modernization consumerism versus culture. Bosworth interrogates not just Venice's history but its meanings and how the city's past has been co-opted to suit present and sometimes ulterior aims. Venice he shows is a city where its histories as well as its waters ripple on the surface.

This book provides an exploration of the geographic dimensions of climate change focusing on both urban and rural perspectives by examining the unique challenges and opportunities that arise in different environments. It offers a balanced and holistic approach to climate mitigation. It demonstrates how geographical analysis may guide and strengthen efforts to mitigate climate change by bringing together a variety of tactics case studies and research findings from around the world. The main topics covered include urban planning and climate resilience rural land use and sustainability the role of geographic information systems GIS in climate modeling and the socio-economic impacts of climate policies. Special emphasis is placed on the interconnectedness of urban and rural ecosystems recognizing that solutions in one domain can have ripple effects in the other. For instance the book explores how rural land conservation can support urban carbon sequestration efforts or how sustainable urban design can reduce the pressure on natural rural resources. These topics are crucial as the world faces environmental changes. Cities are responsible for the majority of global emissions yet rural areas often suffer the consequences of climate impacts. Understanding the geographic factors influencing both regions is crucial to developing tailored effective mitigation strategies the book explores the innovative approaches such as the use of nature based solutions in urban areas or regenerative agriculture in rural settings that offer promising routes for sustainable development the problem addressed in this book is the lack of a unified geographic perspective on climate change mitigation by discussing urban and rural strategies it aims to encourage cross disciplinary collaboration and inspire actionable solutions that answer to the needs of diverse communities climate change is a global issue but its impacts and solutions are deeply localized understanding these geographic issues is essential for policymakers urban planners landscape architects environmental scientists and community leaders targeted at academics professionals and policymakers involved in climate change urban planning landscape architecture and environmental management this book provides readers with the insights needed to create impactful location specific strategies for a more resilient and sustainable future
